

“In conversation with Senator John Kerry” - how foreign affairs and energy will be intrinsically linked under new Administration and Congress

To mark the inauguration of President Barack Obama and with what will surely be the beginning of a period of great change in US and world affairs, global business and financial communications consultancy FD has developed a series of interviews with a bipartisan selection of policymakers. These exclusive discussions explore current issues and policy changes that will emerge under the new Administration and the 111th Congress.

The first of these interviews is: 'In conversation with Senator John Kerry'. It focuses on how U.S. foreign affairs and energy issues will be intrinsically linked under the new US Administration and Congress.

The interview can be viewed in full on the following microsite:
<http://fdshift.wordpress.com/>.

Senator John F. Kerry (D-MA) is a former US Presidential candidate and has recently been appointed as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Please contact your local FD representative or USelections@FD.com with any questions or requests.